Add Your Rating Download PodPhone to PC 5 Editors Rating What's New in Version 5.00.01 PodPhone to PC 5.0.01 It's been over a month since we have released the last version of PodPhone to PC, so today we are ready to roll out the next version 5.0.01 that provides some small improvements and bug fixes. Most of the improvements are for people who want to modify program settings and audio output properties. There were few improvements regarding the performance of audio player. To improve the sound quality of audio playback, we have moved audio player to another thread to get rid of other operations such as transferring files, previewing them and so on. This doesn't affect program functionality as the original audio player would always switch to another thread. If you want to know more details about PodPhone to PC 5.0.01, please refer to this thread on Windows Vista, Windows XP, Windows 7 & Windows 8 users. Otherwise, here are the features of this release: Improvements in PodPhone to PC - The program now accepts longer file names. In the past, it was able to process files with a maximum length of 255 characters. Now, it can process files with a maximum length of 512 characters. This is due to the fact that it takes advantage of the recent OS changes. -Added some improvements in the user interface. For example, you can now set a specific folder as the default saving directory when transferring files to a computer. -Improved program settings (ex. the default output folder for audio files) and added a new setting "Add files to playlist as source". By enabling this setting, you will be able to add the files being transferred to a playlist as the source of the playlist. Bug Fixes -Fixed the program that was crashing during operation in some circumstances.
