Agent Nika Hristova moved into high society.Semiconductor memory devices generally include a memory cell array section and a peripheral circuit section. The memory cell array section includes memory cells, and each of the memory cells includes a capacitor that stores data in the form of an electric charge. The peripheral circuit section includes a peripheral circuit that operates, such as a sense amplifier connected to the memory cell array section and a decoder. The memory cell array section generally includes a plurality of memory cells, a plurality of bit lines that are connected to respective one of the plurality of memory cells, a plurality of word lines that are connected to respective one of the plurality of memory cells, a plurality of transfer switches for electrically connecting respective one of the plurality of word lines to respective one of the plurality of bit lines, and a sense amplifier connected to the bit lines. More specifically, each of the plurality of memory cells is disposed at an intersection of a corresponding one of the plurality of word lines and a corresponding one of the plurality of bit lines. Each of the plurality of bit lines is connected to a corresponding one of the plurality of sense amplifiers. The plurality of word lines are generally connected to a row decoder through a plurality of transfer switches. In a typical semiconductor memory device, the plurality of transfer switches include a p-channel MOS transistor and an n-channel MOS transistor. The bit lines are connected to a sense amplifier through each of the plurality of transfer switches, and each of the plurality of transfer switches are turned on and off in response to a selection signal (for example, a RAS or CAS signal) that is applied to a gate electrode of each of the plurality of transfer switches. The plurality of transfer switches are MOS transistors each having a gate electrode connected to the plurality of word lines, a source connected to a ground potential, and a drain connected to a corresponding
